Smoking policy takes effect soon

The notice above will soon appear throughout Gallaudet's Kendall Green and Northwest campuses as the University's new smoking policy takes effect beginning Oct. 1.

Although many buildings at Gallaudet have had smoking policies for a number of years, the idea of having an official, campus-wide policy was undertaken by the Staff Advisory Committee after a number of people raised concerns earlier this year about the health hazards presented by smoking.

In the spring, the council conducted a survey through On The Green, and the results showed that 375 of the 430 people who responded supported the idea of a University-wide smoking policy.

The policy, which states that "the right of the non smoker to protect his or her health and comfort will take precedence over another person's right to smoke," was approved in August by University President I. King Jordan.

The policy states that smoking will be prohibited in the following places:

- Classrooms, lecture halls, auditoriums, gymnasiums, laboratories, storage areas, mechanical equipment rooms, hallways, corridors, and areas where volatile, flammable, or explosive materials are in use.
 - · Common areas, including the snack bar, the Abbey, elevators, reception rooms, client service areas, mail rooms, copier rooms, restrooms, and lounges, except where specifically designated as "smoking permitted."

- · All dining facilities.
- All libraries
- Areas in which smokers and nonsmokers work together.
 - Meeting and conference rooms.
- Residence hall rooms except where specifically designated "smoking permitted."

Private offices (floor to ceiling partitions with doors closed) may be designated as "smoking permitted" if the occupants choose, provided there is sufficient ventilation. Other specifically designated areas where smoking may be permitted can be determined by designated administrators.

Regarding his decision to pass the policy, Dr. Jordan said, "Smoking kills people. That is a fact clearly demonstrated by a great deal of research. And in that context, I am delighted that we are implementing a smoking policy that will help to protect the health of the students, faculty, and staff members at Gallaudet. For those people who are now smokers, and who wish to quit smoking, please know that we will do our best to encourage and support you in your efforts."

Cindi Olson, secretary of the Staff Advisory Committee, added, "We hope this is another step toward a healthful environment."

Workshops for people who wish to quit smoking will be offered through the Department of Administrative and Community Services.

For more information about the policy, faculty, staff, and students should contact their department chairperson, supervisor, or residence hall personnel.

Students begin first year of new Ph.D. program in clinical psychology

Gallaudet's graduate program in clinical psychology, the second Ph.D. program to be initiated in the University's history and the only program of its kind in the world, began this semester.

Graduates of the program will be able to offer, for the first time, specialized psychotherapy and psychiatric evaluations for deaf and hard of hearing people.

"There are no training programs in clinical psychology anywhere in the world offering specialization in work with deaf clients," said Dr. Virginia Gutman, director of the program and a professor in the Psychology Department. "There is a tremendous need for people who can conduct research and treatment for the mental health needs of deaf people."

She added that the Ph.D. program is especially geared for deaf and hard of hearing people who want to develop skills in clinical psychology.

"Currently, deaf people don't have many choices for treatment," said Gutman. "In most communities, they can go to a clinical psychologist and use an interpreter, or they can go to a facility where the staff knows [generally] about deafness, but not their particular problem." Graduates from the program will be able to work in a multitude of settings, providing services at community mental health settings, hospitals, and universities.

From a field of 25 applicants, seven students—two of whom are deaf Gallaudet graduates—were selected for the program's first year. "Our limit is eight students per year," said Gutman, "but we wanted to start a little smaller the first year." Gutman, Dr. Larry Stewart, and Dr. Donna Morere lead the clinical psychology program, and two more faculty will be added eventually, Gutman said.

In the five-year Ph.D. program, students will spend four years taking coursework, developing clinical skills, and receiving clinical training on and off campus. The fifth year will be spent in an internship. Because its graduates must be able to work with diverse groups of deaf, hard of hearing, and hearing people, students are required to take developmental orientation for three years, each year focusing on a different group—children, adults, and elderly people.

The Psychology Department started a three-year graduate program in school psychology in 1978, where graduates receive a master's degree and a specialist degree in school psychology.

"The school psychologist program has been very successful," remarked Psychology Department Chairman H. Neil Reynolds. To date, 89 students from the school psychology program have accepted jobs in 26 states, plus Canada, France, and Nigeria.

Canada, France, and Nigeria.

Reynolds said that both of the graduate programs have been set up to meet entry-level criteria for today's job market. A master's degree and a specialist certificate are necessary for a school environment, and a Ph.D. is needed to gain work in a clinical setting, he explained.

Adding a clinical psychology program had been under consideration for several years, but it was not until the late 1980s that the department felt that it had the resources to begin the program. In 1988, when Dr. I. King Jordan became the University's president and said that education in the mental continued on page 2

Among Ourselves

Steve Weiner, who has been acting director of the Career Center, became its director on Aug. 26. Weiner started his professional career as head resident adviser at MSSD and then was assistant dean of Student Affairs at Gallaudet University. He later served as coordinator of Student Life and Training at the Texas School for the Deaf in Austin and deputy director of the Nor-Cal Center on Deafness in Sacramento, Calif., where he also served as commissioner of the Attorney General's Commission on Disability.

Dr. Larry Stewart, associate professor in Gallaudet University's doctoral program in clinical psychology, published his article "Deaf Children and the Regular Education Initiative: A View from Within" in the spring Quarterly, a publication of the Illinois Council for Exceptional Children.

Dr. Michael Miller, professor of foreign languages and literatures, presented his paper "A Mexican Novel of Feminine Protest: Arrancame la vida by Angeles Mastretta" at the University of Cincinnati's 10th Annual Conference on Romance Languages and Literatures, May 16-18.

Gallaudet Music Program Director Diane Merchant, her assistant Mary Leonino, MSSD music instructor Charlie Allen, and Betsy Kipila, who coordinates the Cued Speech program and teaches cello in her free time, participated in a presentation on the University's music program at the Third National Conference on Music and the Hearing Impaired, held here July 29-31. Music students Darryl Singleton and Jim Fugate also participated in the presentation.

Frances Croft, director of the Alternative Learning Center, and Cynthia Edwards, assistant professor of English, both from the School of Preparatory Studies (SPS), gave presentations at the 17th International Congress on Education of the Deaf held in Rochester, N.Y., July 29-Aug. 3. They presented and monitored a "Panel on Support Services for Under prepared Postsecondary Students." They also presented the papers, "Questions About Communication and Culture Among Postsecondary Deaf Students," by SPS faculty members Dr. Catherine Andersen, Judith Bergan, and Nancy Lewis of the Department of Communication and Developmental Studies, and "The Effect of Repetition on the Recall of a Captioned Film by Hearing Impaired Postsecondary Students," by Lloyd and Catherine Andersen.

Mary Lou Novitsky, producer of "Deaf Mosaic," was the keynote speaker at the 104th Annual Convention of the Pennsylvania Society for the Advancement of the Deaf held recently in Williamsport, Pa.

Mary Price, a nurse with Gallaudet University's Student Health Services, and student Brenda Kenney presented the workshop "Breaking the Barriers" at the American Red Cross Youth Leadership Development Conference held Aug. 6 at St. Mary's College. The workshop introduced 27 students and staff members to the definitions and causes of deafness, deaf family life, and various communication methods and assistive devices that deaf and hard of hearing people use.

MSSD staff members Beth Benedict, director of Student Development at MSSD, Dale Ford, guidance counselor, and Wilton McMillan, director of Student Life, conducted the annual Summer Leadership Training Program for Deaf High School Students held Aug. 12-17 at the Ohio School for the Deaf in Columbus, Ohio. McMillan also presented "The Student Development Approach: Developing the WHOLE Student" at the Texas Statewide Conference on Education of the Deaf held Aug. 15-17 in Houston, Texas. Lourdes Rubio, coordinator of Hispanic Services, presented an overview of Pre-College Programs' Office of Hispanic Services at the conference, and Marketing Coordinator Todd Lenz and Outreach Services Director Susan Murray staffed a conference exhibit about Pre-College Programs.

Ron Stern, formerly director of the Athletics Department, left the University on Aug. 21 to begin his new position as director of instruction at the California School for the Deaf in Fremont.

MSSD faculty members Jennifer McMillan and Janet Weinstock gave a workshop on American Sign Language to teachers, dormitory supervisors, and professional staff at the Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind on Aug. 29.

Dr. Deborah Sonnenstrahl, chairwoman of the Art Department, was recently inducted into the National Congress of Jewish Deaf (NCJD) Hall of Fame because of her work to make museums accessible to deaf people and her advocacy work for deaf artists. Her work as an art history professor and actress were also noted during the ceremony, which took place at the NCJD's convention held Aug. 10 in the Meadowlands Hilton Hotel in Secaucus, N.J.

Dr. J. Matt Searls, a placement counselor with the Career Center, will begin a new position this month as assistant professor of human development and psychological services at the National Technical Institute for the Deaf in Rochester, N.Y. Searls was the first person from the Virginia School for the Deaf's Class of 1975 and the first deaf person in the school's 150 years to receive a Ph.D.

MSSD teacher Janet Weinstock gave a presentation about deaf culture and studies to faculty and staff members at the New York School for the Deaf on Sept. 5. Her presentation gave special emphasis to how teachers can apply deaf culture and studies throughout the kindergarten through grade 12 curriculum.

Shawn Davies, scientific communications coordinator for Graduate Studies and Research, recently returned from a three and one-half-month study of bilingual education practices for deaf children in Sweden and Denmark. Her research was supported by a grant from the World Institute on Disability. Davies plans to give some campus presentations about her study.

Sichan Siv (center), deputy assistant to the president for public liaison at the White House, talks with President Jordan through interpreter Brenda Marshall at House One. Siv, who is taking an ASL class at Gallaudet on Saturday mornings, also toured the campus.

Cristina offers $50,000 prize for new name for 'disabled' people

Handicapped. Disabled. Impaired. All of these words are ones that stress disabilities instead of accomplishments.

Because of the negative connotations of words such as these, the National Cristina Foundation (NCF) is sponsoring a contest to create a new and positive word for people who can perform all the functions required of them in their work, or in their personal lives, despite a physical or mental disability.

The winner of the contest will be awarded a check for $50,000 after a panel of judges makes a decision on Jan. 29, 1991.

Entries should consist of either a single new word or a new combination of existing words with a clear single meaning—a positive description of people with disabilities.

Initially, the words will be screened by the English Department at Johns Hopkins University. Semi-finalist words will be submitted to a panel of volunteer judges including journalists, novelists, etymologists, government officials, and celebrities.

Entries should be postmarked no later than Nov. 30 and sent to NCF Contest, 2301 Argonne Drive, Baltimore, MD 21218. Although more than one entry per person is allowed, each must be submitted in a separate envelope or postcard.

Crime report

The following criminal activities at Gallaudet from Aug. 21 to Sept. 8 were reported by the Department of Safety and Security (DOSS). Crimes such as minor vandalisms, simple assaults, and petty thefts occurring in predominantly student areas have been omitted. No suspects were identified unless otherwise noted.

 8/30—Cushman utility truck #107 was stolen from the University and found off campus; three Rubbermaid handtrucks were stolen near the University's Dining Hall.

• 9/1—A vehicle parked in the West Plaza area was damaged; $47 was stolen from a wallet in Fowler Hall.

• 9/2—Various equipment was stolen from an unsecured locker in the locker room.

 9/4—A computer and keyboard were stolen from Hall Memorial Building.

• 9/5—A purse was stolen from the Bookstore.

More information and literature about the contest is available by calling 1-900-WORD. Each call costs $3, which goes toward helping NCF accomplish its mission.

NCF is a nonprofit organization that directs commercially obsolete computers, software, and video and audio equipment to organizations that train people with disabilities.

Ph.D. program gets under way

Gutman spent a year preparing a proposal, which was submitted in 1989 and approved by the University Faculty and the Board of Trustees.

Although the new Ph.D. program has only been operating for a few weeks, Gutman said she is "very pleased. We have a diverse, enthusiastic group of students." She said there is also strong support for the program from other area universities with clinical psychology graduate programs, and from professional associations in the fields of psychology and deafness.

Twenty new GUIDE participants begin program with two-day retreat

Twenty employees selected to be participants in this year's GUIDE (Gallaudet University—Innovation, Direction, and Empowerment) program are beginning their participation with a reception and a two-day retreat.

At the Monday, Sept. 17, reception, President I. King Jordan, Provost Harvey Corson, and Vice President for Administration Paul Kelly were scheduled to address the group.

A two-day off-campus retreat on Sept. 18 and 19 will introduce new participants to the program, patterned after "Leadership Washington," an organization that gives professionals a forum in which to learn, exchange ideas, and network. This is the second year of the GUIDE program at Gallaudet.

During the retreat, GUIDE members will discuss the results of the Myers-Briggs type indicator, facilitated by Jo Ann Brown, assistant to the provost. They also will participate in an all-day workshop on leadership training with an outside consultant.

The group will meet monthly to discuss and learn about different areas. For example, a community outreach project is planned for Oct. 25, and on Nov. 14, members will participate in a workshop related to communication.

This year's GUIDE group includes 12 women and eight men. Of the participants, 12 are deaf and 8 are hearing. Sixteen are white, two are black, one is Asian, and one is from Kuwait one is Asian, and one is from Kuwait. The 1990-91 GUIDE members, their positions, and the departments they work for are:

The award-winning stories, selected from among 143 entries, were Walter's "Growing Together" (Winter '89-90), "Different Stories, Same Dreams (Fall '89), and "Members of the Bar" (Spring '89); Johnstone's "The Line is Busy..." (Summer '89); and McConnell's "There's Music in the Air" (Winter '89-90).

Statewide conference addresses needs of deaf West Virginians

Social workers, physicians, special education personnel, deaf adults, and legislators were among those who addressed the needs of West Virginia's deaf and hard of hearing citizens at a statewide conference held Sept. 5 and 6.

The conference, part of the Governor's Partnership for Progress agenda, kicked off a three-year project funded by the Claude Worthington Benedum Foundation to make health care more accessible to West Virginia's 128,000 deaf and hard of hearing people. The project will work through West Virginia's 64 acute care hospitals to provide early diagnosis and intervention of hearing losses, access to TDDs, and interpreters and sign language classes.

The keynote speaker for the conference was Gallaudet University's Dr. Larry Stewart, an associate professor in the doctoral program in clinical psychology in the Department of Psychology, who spoke about the fundamental mental health needs of all people.

"I tried to develop two impressions on these health care workers: that deaf people have the same basic human needs anyone else has, and that health care is crucial as a basic human need—for without it, mental health problems can be anticipated to come," he said.

Conference participants attended panel discussions on the frustrations, problems, and rewards that occur within families who have deaf children. A state organization for parents of deaf children was established, and area commissions for deaf and hard of hearing people were reviewed.

West Virginia, Kentucky, and North Carolina state commissions for deaf and hard of hearing people presented their respective state profiles, and local hospital professionals presented information on community-based programs.

The conference, held at West Virginia University in Charleston, was sponsored jointly by the West Virginia Hospital Research and Education Foundation and the West Virginia Commission for the Hearing Impaired.

Alumni directory to be published

Finding former Gallaudet classmates will soon become easier with the publication of the first-ever Gallaudet University Alumni Directory.

People interested in ordering the directory must act fast, however, because the directory will not be sold after the scheduled mailing date in October.

The Gallaudet University Alumni Association has contracted with Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company, Inc., to produce the directory. The comprehensive volume will give information about more than 8,000 Gallaudet alumni and will include information such as name, and maiden name where applicable; class years and degrees from Gallaudet; home address and telephone number; job title; and company name, address, and telephone number.

The directory is available in two styles: the Traditional edition at $31.95 and Deluxe edition at $34.95. Postage and handling is an additional $3.95.

The directory is scheduled for mailing this October, and it will not be sold after that time. People interested in ordering a directory can write to Bernard C. Harris Publishing Co., Inc., Customer Service Dept., 3 Barker Ave., White Plains, NY 10601, or call 1-800-877-6554 (voice only).

Students gather outside the Office of Records Management to drop and add classes for the fall semester, which began Sept. 4.

Fulbright awards available for administrators, scholars

Several Fulbright awards are currently available for college and university administrators, and a grant is also available for the Fulbright scholar-inresidence program.

The program includes the following:

• A four-week seminar in the Federal Republic of Germany will allow the scholar to study educational, cultural, and political issues involved in international education. The program is open to full-time administrators, admissions officers, deans, higher education association staff, and others involved in higher education international exchange

• A five-week group program includes four weeks studying higher education, society, and culture in Japan and a one-week visit to Korea for an introduction to Korean higher education. Applicants should have at least five years of full-time work experience in foreign student admissions, advising, or international education services.

• Up to three independent awards are available for short-term professional projects while affiliated with a university or degree-awarding institution. Applicants must work full time in a four-year or graduate institution in instruction and academic affairs, business and financial management, student and academic support services, institutional development, or international programs.

 Proposals are being accepted for a Fulbright grant to host a visiting lecturer from abroad with the goal of developing international programs at colleges or universities. Preference will be given to proposals in the humanities or social sciences.

The application deadline is Nov. 1
Application materials are available from the Council for International Exchange of Scholars, 3400 International Drive NW, Suite M-500, Box NEWS, Washington, DC 20008-3097, 686-7877.
